ABSTRACT

The University Libraries Computer Search Service (State University of New York at Albany, SUNYA) provides access to databases from many vendors including BRS, Dialog, Wilsonline, CA Search, and Westlaw. Members of the Computer Search Service, Collection Development, and Reference Service staffs select vendor services and new databases for their support of undergraduate, graduate, and research programs on the SUNYA campus. To facilitate the use of these vendor services and more than 250 databases, a customized subject index was prepared to aid in the selection of databases for retrospective searches, end user searches, and ready reference use of online databases. The database index, which alphabetically lists all databases currently available, was created by selecting keywords and subject headings from the following five sources: (1) the database documentation created by the database vendors; (2) the database thesaurus or database user manual created by the database producer; (3) BRS' database FILE headings from the subject paragraph; (4) the Knowledge Industry Publications' database KIPI subject headings on BRS; and (5) the compilers' personal knowledge of the content of the databases. The total number of headings assigned to each database ranges from 4 to 25, and the total number of headings for the more than 250 databases is approximately 2,500. The index is available at the reference desks and in the Computer Search Service offices of the University Libraries. (Author/THC)

TITLE: Subject Index to Databases Available from Computer Search Service

ABSTRACT:

The University Libraries Computer Search Service (State Unviversity of New York at Albany) provides access to databases available from vendors such as BRS Information Technologies, BRS/AFTER DARK, DIALOG, WILSONLINE, CA SEARCH, and WESTLAW. Members of the Computer Search Service, Collection Development, and Reference Service staffs select vendor services and new databases for their support of undergraduate, graduate, and research programs on the SUNYA campus. In order to facilitate the use of these vendor services and over 250 databases, a customized subject index was prepared to aid the selection of databases for retrospective searches, end-user searches, and ready reference use of online databases. The index was developed using an Osborne Executive I microcomputer with 128K of internal memory and two 200K single sided, double density disk drives. A five megabyte Trantor hard disk drive driven through the Osborne's IEEE 488 port augments the system's storage capacity and speeds up input/output operations. The index was printed on a Daisywriter letter quality printer. The Executive is CP/M based and is supplied with WordStar, SuyperCalc, two versions of BASIC, the UCSD-P operating system, and Personal Pearl, a database management system. The Personal Pearl and WordStar software are the basis for the index. The database index was created by selecting keywords and subject headings form the following five sources: (1) the database documentation created by the database vendors, (2) the database thesaurus or database user manual created by the database producer, (3) BRS' database FILE headings from the SU (subject) paragraph, (4) the Knowledge Industry Publications database KIPI subject headings on BRS, and (5) the compilers personal knowledge of the content of the databases. The total number of headings assigned to each database ranges from four to twenty five, and the total number of headings for the 250+ databases is approximately 2,500. The index is made available at the reference desks and in the Computer Search Service offices of the University Libraries.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this index is to provide better access to the databases available through the Computer Search Service. It lists alphabetically all databases currently available from BRS, AFTER DARK, DIALOG, and WILSONLINE. The WESTLAW files are included in the index/database keyword section only. The database directory section is provided to show the variety of databases available including nonbibliographic, directory, bibliographic, news, and statistical files and to assist in database selection.

Library users should consult with reference librarians at the Main Library or the Graduate Library for Public Policy to discuss term papers, research projects, grants, or dissertations. There are databases in almost every field containing information concerning any conceivable topic. An appointment is needed to search these files. You can make the arrangements at the Main or Graduate Library reference desks. A librarian will interview you, design a strategy, and execute the search for you on databases available from BRS, DIALOG, WILSONLINE, and WESTLAW. You may search the databases available on the AFTER DARK service on your own by reserving a time slot to use the terminals in the Main Library Computer Search Service Offices. A brochure describing all of these services is available at the reference desks of both libraries.
